The First World Forum on Talent, Agora Talentia, will take place in Pamplona, the capital city of Navarra in Spain, on 11 and 12 February. The organisers aim to turn to forum into a biennial event. Although the European Commission and the European Parliament are sponsoring' this event through the 2009 European Year of Creativity and Innovation, no direct financial means are provided by the EU. The forum will seek to "identify the critical factors and the key elements to the development of talent, sharing concerns and defining future trends through dialogue" between professionals, organisations and businesses. The costs of the event (around half a million euro) will be covered by entrance fees, with contributions from local governments, non-profit organisations as well as the OECD. (MSL)
